Section on Early Education and Child Care

The American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) is an organization of more than 60,000 pediatric medical, surgical, and multidisciplinary subspecialists committed to the attainment of optimal, physical, mental and social health for all children, adolescents, and young adults.

More than half of the AAP's members belong to one or more sections. Sections develop ideas and generate programs that improve the care of infants, children, adolescents, and young adults. Sections were developed within the AAP for members who are interested and/or trained in specific areas of pediatrics. Although their primary goal is education, sections are also involved in policy development, public education, and advocacy for children. As a section member you will have the opportunity to share ideas with and learn from colleagues who share your specific interests and/or subspecialty background.

In 2008, the Academy established the Section on Early Education and Child Care as a permanent section to provide a forum for pediatricians and others interested in promoting the optimal development, health, and safety of children in child care.

Section Objectives

The objectives of the AAP Section on Early Education and Child Care are the following:

- Sustain a network of pediatric child care experts and health professionals to promote health/safety within child care programs and engage parents in discussions about quality care and their child care options.
- Increase the use of health and safety policies and practices in child care programs.
- Enable child care professionals to help families access medical homes and community resources.
- Maximize opportunities for health promotion in early childhood and ensure that children in child care enter school healthy and ready to learn.

Section Accomplishments

The Section Web site:

www.healthychildcare.org – This Web site provides resources on early childhood education and the health and safety of children in child care with customized sections for health professionals, child care providers, and families.

Caring for Our Children: National Health and Safety Performance Standards, Guidelines for Out-of-Home Child Care Programs, 2nd Edition – This comprehensive resource manual contains national health and safety recommendations and guidelines for children in family- and center-based child care programs.

AAP Chapter Child Care Contacts – These pediatricians have been approved to serve as an AAP point person for child care health and safety and have agreed to partner with others to mobilize relevant efforts in their state.

Child Care, Health, and Early Education and Research (CHEER) Consortium – This group of health professionals and researchers facilitates and encourages other health professionals, caregivers, and researchers to collaborate on research projects and utilize results to improve the quality of care for children in early education and child care settings across the country.

Why Get Involved?

A majority of young children are enrolled in out-of-home child care programs. High-quality early education and child care improves their development, health, and ability to learn. Partnerships with community colleagues can ensure that all young children have access to quality child care within a nurturing environment and have a medical home. By working as a team, community partners can maximize resources, develop comprehensive services, and most importantly nurture and protect children so they enter school healthy and ready to learn!

Pediatricians can be involved in child care on 3 levels by:

- Providing guidance to families on child care issues
- Providing health consultation to child care programs
- Advocating for quality child care
